The participant's tab is the messiest one in the current course. The solution to redundancy and clutter is to simplify the tab, add branding and user accessibility separation. The current mock-ups:

Participants tab checklist

Implementation	Completion status	Comments	Name	Date
The left navigation panel is hidden when the tab is clicked
The course name is visible at the top
The 'Participants' name is clearly defined, less boldness than the course name
A search bar is added
A 'Sort by' dropdown panel is added to sort the users by alphabetical order
A pagination navigation is added at the bottom to split the data
The data is split after the 20th user
For the user only the participants names and roles are visible
Facilitators – can see if the user is in a group and their access status
A clickable box is next to every user in the facilitator's views that allows the facilitator to pick them
The facilitator can select a format after selecting the users
The facilitator can down a report after selecting the users and choosing a format
